Create a temporary string variable in your function Grab the plain text content of your temporary DIV using its "textContent" and "innerText" attributes and assign it to your temporary string variable.. Assign your function's string parameter to your temporary DIV's "innerHTML" attribute.. Create a temporary DIV element inside your JavaScript function using the "createElement()" method.

Using JavaScript and a web page's DOM, you can easily convert HTML to plain text.. Because of cross-browser compatibility issues, both "textContent" and "innerText" will be defined in some web browsers and undefined in others, but one or the other will be defined in all versions of all major browsers.. Define a JavaScript function that takes one string as a parameter This string parameter contains the HTML that you will be converting to plain text.. Your SCRIPT tag needs to have its "type" attribute set to "text/javascript" so that the entire SCRIPT declaration should read as follows: (where the JavaScript code goes between the two tags).
